The two plots are representing the mean and variance of frequency. Node.png shows the results without nodelets, while. nodelets.png is with nodelets.

From the plots, we notice that the average frequency in two plots are similar. However, the variance of frequency with nodelets is much lower. This means that the communication with shared nodelets is more stable.